- Vulnerability: Blind SQL Injection (CONFIRMED)
- URL: <http://test37.netsparker.com:60002/dilemma/SQLiBench2.0/MSSQL-Numeric-Blind-NF/default.aspx>
- PARAMETER NAME: name
- PARAMETER TYPE: Post
- ATTACK PATTERN: 1);WAITFOR DELAY '0:0:25'--

VULNERABILITY DETAILS: SQL Injection occurs when data input for example by a user is interpreted as a SQL command rather than normal data by the backend database. This is an extremely common vulnerability and its successful exploitation can have critical implications. Netsparker confirmed the vulnerability by executing a test SQL Query on the back-end database. In these tests, SQL Injection was not obvious but the different responses from the page based on the injection test allowed us to identify and confirm the SQL Injection.
